He does not give the German losses, but in killed and wounded the losses were about equal between the two armies.

CHRISTIAN EPIC IN STONE

Strassburg Cathedral, Just Behind Battle Line, One of the Glories of Gothic Architecture.

Just back of the line of battle in Alsace, within the zone where thoroughgoing destruction is threatened, another of the marvelous, most worthwhile works of our civilization stands exposed to the varying chances of battle. This is the beautiful cathedral of Strassburg, an architectural glory which makes mock of modern satisfaction at the expense of earlier centuries.

The enormous old minster, famed wherever joy in the ideal is felt, one of the choicest Gothic visions ever dreamed by a master mason, is a memory of ages when art was more a passion and religion and less a means for preference and daily bread.

Strassburg cathedral is a Christian epic in stone. Exquisite in proportion and detail, it rises, a great pile, out of the surrounding city. Its spire vies with the loftiest daring of the New York makers of skyscrapers against a dark background of mountains, whose heights, with the cathedral spire, watch over Upper Alsace.

The spire of the minster is a masterpiece, excelled by no other steeple and equaled by but few. It ends more than 500 feet above the town, and it is a wonder-compelling structure of delicate open stonework, rich in an endless complexity of forms.

After finishing the one spire, builders never attempted to construct the proposed companion to it.

Strassburg differs from other German cathedrals in that it possesses a greater width in proportion to its height. It is one of the most harmonious of Europe's sacred structures.

The doors are very beautiful and the rose window, more than forty feet in diameter, is an artistic achievement that wins the admiration of every visitor.

The building was begun in 1176 and was completed in its present form in 1439. More or less extensive restorations have been necessary, and their lamentable results give grounds for the most discouraging reflections upon the prediction that Reims cathedral can be restored.

EXECUTED COMRADE'S WISH

Civil War Veteran Delivered Message After a Search Extending Over Fifty-Two Years.

A belated message, fifty-two years old, reached the relatives of the late James Riffin, in Laurel, last week, when according to a promise made on the battlefield, William Thurston, a Civil War veteran of Philadelphia, visited the relatives of Riffin in Laurel and told of Riffin's death in the battle of Gettysburg, and his last message to them.

Thurston and Riffin became good friends during the war and, as comrades, promised each other that should one be killed in battle the survivor would search out the family of the other and tell them of his death. Riffin was killed at Gettysburg, fighting by Thurston's side.

After the war Thurston sought diligently, but found no trace of Riffin's relatives until a short time ago when, accidentally, he found that Mrs. P. B. Sirman of Laurel is a niece of the dead man. The visit followed.—Laurel (Del.) Dispatch to Philadelphia Record.

Coal Tar Once Thought Waste.

About a century ago coal tar was considered almost a waste product, and no one had thought it worth while to experiment with it. At that time gas was being introduced as a new light and Frederick Accum, who wrote one of the first books on gas lighting, suggested the boiling of the tar in a still and the condensation and collection of the volatile products. The experiment was made and the process yielded two oils. One was heavy and the other light. It was soon found that the heavy could be satisfactorily used as a preservative for wood that had to be set underground or submerged in water and was used extensively in preserving piers and wharfs.

Stage Humor Has Changed.

Stage humor today isn't quite as outlandish as it used to be fifteen or twenty years ago. Charles H. Hoyt once wanted a certain type of comedian and, hearing of a team called Coyne and McGee playing in an upstairs theater on Third avenue, went to see them. The Coyne was Joe Coyne, now a great favorite both here and in London. McGee began telling Coyne about a chance he had to make a lot of money. "All I need is a stake," said McGee. "That's easy," replied Coyne. With that he took a piece of beef from his pocket, stuck it on his cane and broiled it over the gas foot lights.—New York Letter to the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Without the Death Penalty.

The death penalty has been abolished in Rhode Island since 1852, in Michigan since 1847, in Maine since 1857, in Wisconsin for quite a number of years, in Kansas since 1907, in Holland since 1860, in Saxony since 1868 and in Belgium since 1831. It has been abolished in Italy, Switzerland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Portugal.

Dead Are Free From Debt.

The war will do one thing for the men who die in the trenches; it will relieve them of the burden of helping to pay the war debt. This will be a heritage to their children to the third and fourth generation.—Houston Post.
